

MARKET REPORT – WEEK 36

BASED ON SALES AND PURCHASES OF VESSELS WEEK ENDED FRIDAY 6TH SEPTEMBER 2019.

Although all dry freight indexes, except panamax, closed 'up' last week, they were actually all losing ground from Tuesday onwards (panamax from Monday). Therefore, while the closing figures on Friday saw w-o-w gains of +3.5% for the BDI itself, +10.8% for the BCI, +0.15% for the BSI, +3.6% for the BHSI and a -2% decline for the BPI only, it will be interesting to see how they all trend this week and if indeed if there will be a small correction coming after 4 or 5 weeks of fairly serious dry bulk freight growth.

In spite of the ongoing world geo political uncertainties and lack of ship finance as outlined in our week 35 commentary, week 36 has reported a good many more bulk sales which was not entirely unexpected as people get back behind their desks after summer vacations etc. and are buoyed by the fact that the BDI has improved substantially from its low in week 8 of 2019 at 634 to have closed on Friday at 2462.... If Trump and China can now manage settle their trade differences and the UK can manage to actually leave the EU (or stay) we could then see an even better picture moving forward in which case today's ship sales prices will quickly have become very cheap buys.

The tanker S+P market on the other hand remains very lethargic with buyers in the main still unwilling to face owner's asking prices even though 'on paper' many are not unrealistic. While would be buyers know the wet markets are primed to improve simply no one has any confident idea of when it might happen although we note some increased MR buying interest of late, possibly against some specific new COAs.

There is still nothing positive to report from the Sub continent ship recycling markets with no demo sales to report and levels (if offered at all) if anything falling a bit further to region $340-365 for bulkers, and $350-375 for tankers.
